Urban Gardening

Becky Herman a teacher from Iowa Big along with two of the students working on the Urban Gardening project spoke a little about the project and its purpose.

Jack Studier noted that the students were researching food insecurity, particularly in the greater Cedar Rapids community, and how to solve this problem. Part of their solution was to start some urban farming in the community. They contacted some Bhutanese refugees who live in apartments and are unable to have gardens at their houses. These individuals are currently taking a bus to Marion Walmart and walking along a busy highway 13 just to garden and walk all the way back with tools and food. These students from IowaBIG have been looking into places in Hiawatha to start an urban garden that would be convenient for the refugees and would be useful for others as well.

Council Members and Mayor Bennett expressed their excitement for this project.

Archibald presented RESOLUTION #19-098 approving a one (1) year allowance for urban farming on the property described as Hiawatha North 1st Addition, Lot 1 as requested by Iowa BIG, seconded by Dodson.
